MR. AND MRS. GEORGE VANDER-BILT.

On Saturday afternoon George W. Vanderbilt brought to his palatiel home in Carolina its new mistress, his bride. Preparations for this home coming were being made all last week and every train that passed through Ashe ville brought rich additions to the already gorgeous furnishings of Bilt-

When it was known in Ashevil e that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt would arrive on the afternoon train Saturday. with their private car, Swannsnoa, a large crowd collected at the depot a: d gave them an enthusiastic greeing as hey entered a victoria and started for Biltmore. They were accompanied only by a valet and a maid and were escorted by three gentlemen, the managers of the estate, who preceded them on horseback to their home.

The Asheville Gazette says concerning their reception within the grounds The roads were as smooth as glass and the strawberry bed had been primed and trimmed into perfect sym metry. The estate was spick and spar nroughout. Nothing unusual occurred as Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt drove along notil they reached the road that leads o the mansien. Here they were confronted by a big horse shoe of flowers arehing the road. On either side of he road were lined the employes of the estate. Each department had a symbol. The dairymen stood beside some of the finest cows, the gardners held vegetable stalks, the foresters bad twigs and green ribbons on the lapels of their coats, while the florists tossed roses, carnations and a za'eas before the carriage. "A cheer went up as the master and mistress of Biltmore passed. Mr. Van derbilt doffed his hat and she smiled. Both bowed frequently in response to

'From the archway to the mansion the carriage passed over a road that BURKE & HERBERT was carpeted with bridal roses. As the victoria swurg gracefully to the portal the house servants lined themselves up in the hallway, stiff and stolid eyed in new liveries

At night the employes of the estate participated in a torchlight procession and the Biltmore band played throughout the evening, while brilliant ficeworks illuminated the grounds and bonfires lighted up the hills around the mansion.

Concerning the appearance of the bride on her arrivel, an Asheville paner says: Some two inches taller than Mr. Vanderbilt, she has a fine form and carriage. She was attired in a pearl gray traveling gown of simple design and wore on English walking hat of the same color. About her neck was a feather collarette. Her dark brown hair was waved and dressed cather high. Her features are aristoratic, though her face is full. Her neeks were a fine brown tan, acquired no doubt in the recent sea voyage. She smiled prettily as she faced the
